Runway

These runways have seen many a Spitfire or a Hurricane in their time! This is where planes would take off from to defend Britain where pilots scrambled and where the lucky ones and their planes would return safely home.

Spitfires travel at a top speed of 584km/h which is much faster than the Germans fastest plane at the time.

Would you like to have been a pilot in WW2?

Always remember that Kenley is an active airfield. So for your safety remain outside of the yellow line at all times and please read all on-site safety signage.

Blast pen

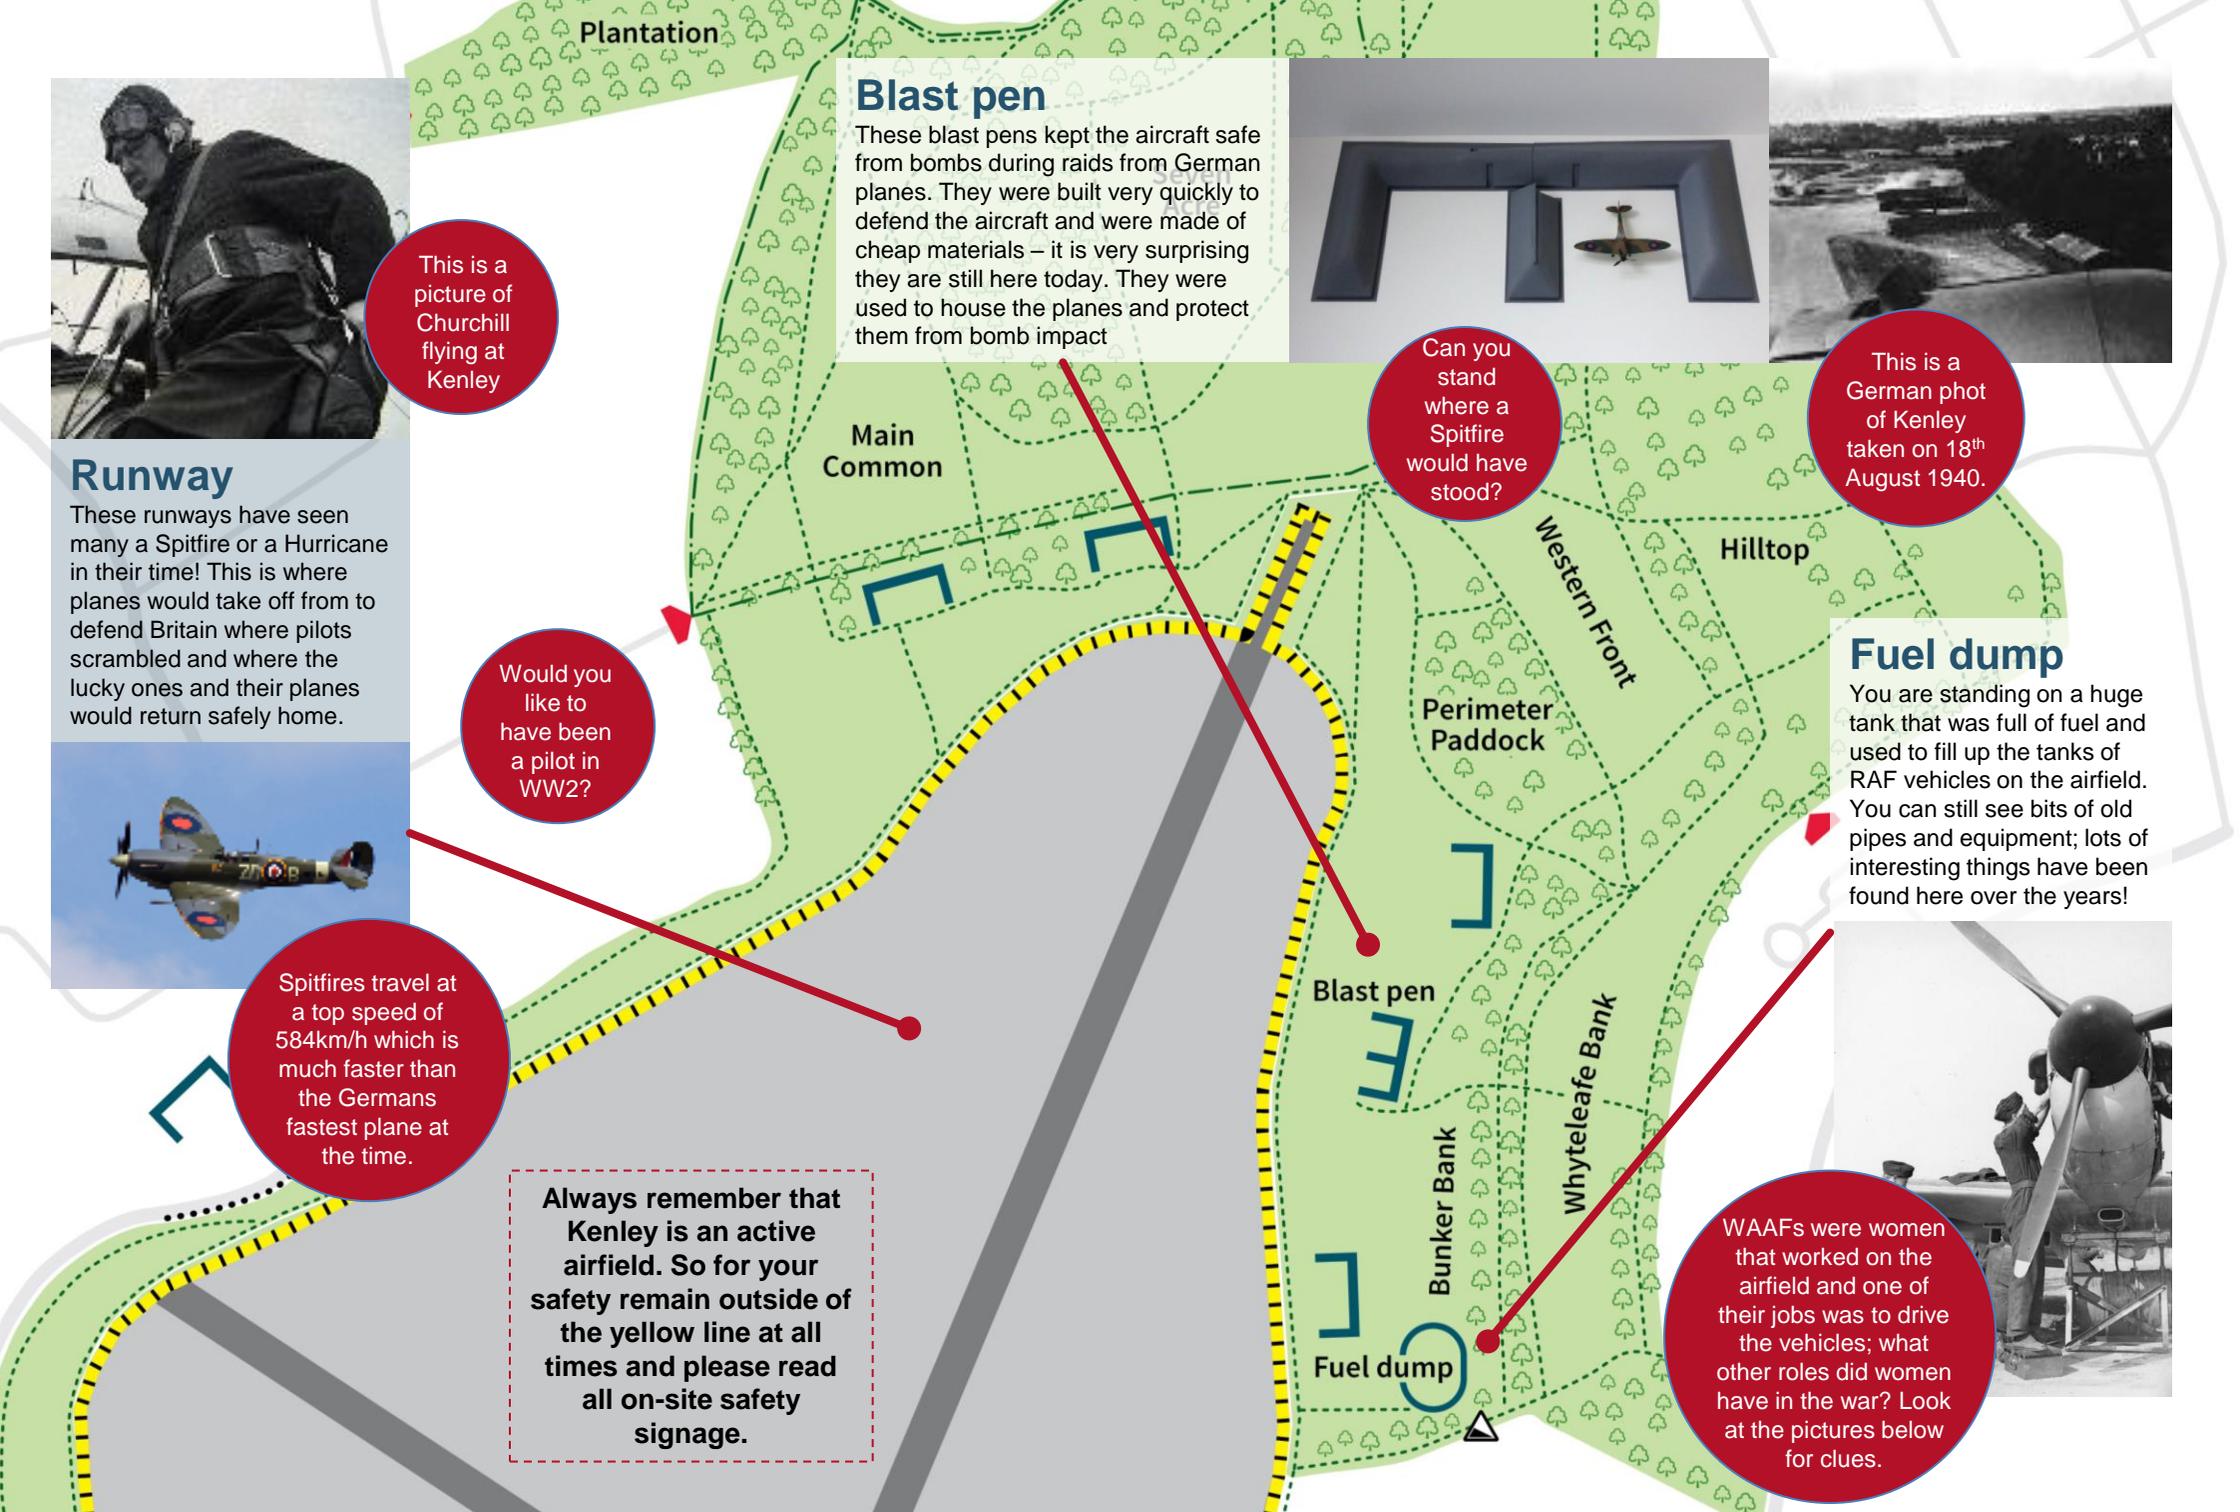

These blast pens kept the aircraft safe from bombs during raids from German planes. They were built very quickly to defend the aircraft and were made of cheap materials – it is very surprising they are still here today. They were used to house the planes and protect them from bomb impact

Can you stand where a Spitfire would have stood?

Fuel dump

You are standing on a huge tank that was full of fuel and used to fill up the tanks of RAF vehicles on the airfield. You can still see bits of old pipes and equipment; lots of interesting things have been found here over the years!

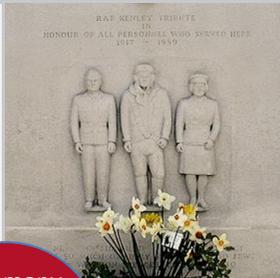

WAAFs were women that worked on the airfield and one of their jobs was to drive the vehicles; what other roles did women have in the war? Look at the pictures below for clues.

Tribute

Kenley would have been very busy with lots of people helping for the war effort from many different countries. Look at the tribute and count how many countries are mentioned. Lots of countries coming together to help defend Britain was an important reason why we won the Battle of Britain.

How many countries can you find on the Tribute?

Hangers

Rifle range

Can you see the brick damage created by RAF servicemen testing their ammunition and aligning the guns on their planes correctly? Many WW2 artefacts have been found here.

Why do you think some holes are bigger than others?

Can you name the different roles needed on the airfield? Lots of different skills were needed when this was a fighter airfield.

Coulsdon Common

Did you know that a Hurricane could be rearmed and refueled in 9 minutes.

Plant spotting guide

Stone crop

You might find this growing on the blast pens.

Sainfoin

This flower likes the chalky ground the airfield is built on.

Birds-foot-trefoil

This plant has many other funny names it is known by such as 'Granny's toenails' or 'Eggs and Bacon'! If you could make up a name for this flower; what would you call it?

Sneezewort

This plant was used to help people sneeze not stop them.

Can you find any other plants growing on the airfield that are not on this list?

Our Wall

Read this poem written by BOB pilot William Walker who was stationed at Kenley during his time in the RAF.

Here inscribed the names of friends we knew,
Young men with whom we often flew.
Scrambled to many angels high,
They knew that they or friends might die.
Many were very scarcely trained,
And many badly burnt or maimed.
Behind each name a story lies
Of bravery in summer skies;
Though many brave unwritten tales
Were simply told in vapour trails.
Many now lie in sacred graves
And many rest beneath the waves.
Outnumbered every day they flew

Can you read out this poem to someone in your group?

Learn More

The Kenley Revival Project aims to conserve and protect Britain's most intact WW2 fighter airfield. As well as our Education programme for schools and family groups we provide; annual archaeology digs on site, a project website and online archive, regular events, an established volunteering programme and an oral history project. If you would like to take part or learn more please visit kenleyrevival.org for more information and to join our monthly newsletter for project updates, events and opportunities.

How you can help

Want to get involved? Our fantastic volunteers help to run our project by undertaking oral history interviews, running school workshops, writing blog posts for our websites and much more! Visit kenleyrevival.org/volunteering to find out more information and how to get involved.
